

A safer games

Russia is mounting one of the largest security efforts in Olympic history for the Winter Games at Sochi, largely due to the city's proximity to the volatile Caucasus and terrorist groups in Dagestan and Chechnya.

150,000

Estimated number who died during two recent wars in Chechnya

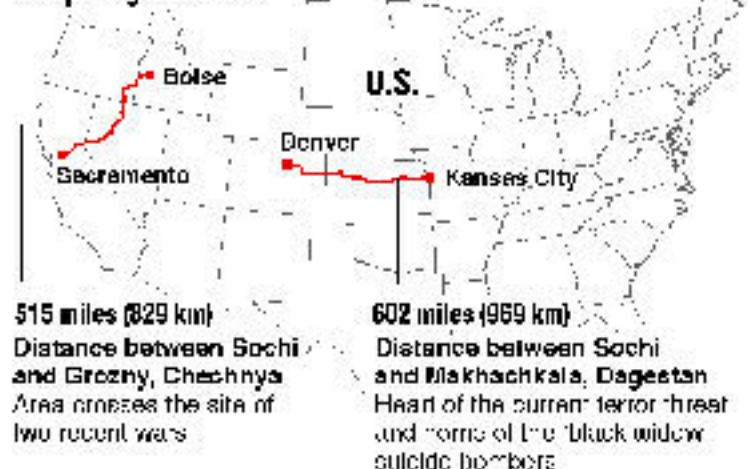

13

Number of imams killed in Dagestan since June 2010

800

Police, police employees killed in Dagestan since 2011

Comparing distances

$50 billion

Cost of staging games in Sochi

$2 billion

Spent on security for the games

100,000

Security forces at the games

10,000

Number of special forces patrolling Caucasus Mountains near venues